GIRLPOWER EVENT GIVES GIRLS STEM POWER

WestSide High School hosted a very cool event called GirlPower last Wednesday that created an opportunity for groups of girls to work together to identify a community problem and try to solve it. I spoke with Sheena Zacherle, about the program. She's the graduation specialist, a career and technical education teacher, leadership advisor and robotics coach at WestSide.

Zacherle said the event was designed to encourage girls to consider STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) opportunities in school and as a career. A relatively low percentage of women can be found in those fields.

GirlPower was organized through Central Washington GEAR UP, a federal program designed to encourage low-income kids to seek higher education. Hilary Martinez coordinated the event at the school and a group of community mentors was on hand to provide guidance and encouragement. The winning team members each received a Kindle Fire.

After the student groups identified a community problem, they took turns picking through a pile of computer parts and assorted other junk and then their teams worked to create a prototype solution to the problem. "The things that kids created were amazing," Zacherle told me. One team identified wildfire as an issue to be solved and then designed a water system to put fires out.

The more opportunities that we can create in our schools to give students the chance to take risks, stretch their minds and apply their creativity to addressing problems relevant to their lives, the better.

WestSide's Healthy Kids Grant Produces Fun Activities

In the spring of 2015, WestSide High School learned that we had received the Healthy Kids Grant from the state of Washington. We immediately put in a new water bottle filling station with drinking fountain adjacent to our Fitness Room. We also added all new Fitness Equipment to make our Fitness Room state of the art. The other three projects were significantly more challenging: basketball court, volleyball, and a walking trail. I am very happy to announce that our SportsCourt Basketball Court is officially open and our volleyball court is ready to roll. We will work on the walking trail this winter and spring to finish the grant up by June 2018.

WestSide Gives

WestSide has embraced volunteerism and giving back to our community and school once again. This time as a school and not just our Leadership Club. Each and every Day School student chose how they wanted to volunteer through options sponsored by the staff at WestSide. We began a lunch buddy program with WestSide students at Newbery Elementary. We also had a sock drive at Newberry Elementary called Soctober. There was also a canned food drive, a group cleaning all the laptops in the school, positive rock painting, letters to veterans, detailing the WSHS Suburban (below), peer tutoring program, and a group reading to the students at the WestSide Early Learning Center.
